MINISTERIAL COMMUNICATION
17 MAY 2005

RE: Response to Letters of 10 May and 13 May

Mr. Wilde:

Apologies for the lateness with which I am responding to both of your letters sent via the Ezboard Inbox system. I must admit that I use a master account feature which keeps me logged into my macronational account so I tend to be late in noticing any communications sent via the system to my micronational account.

Thank you for setting up the account for the Gotzborg Eagle as was requested. There have been a lot of technical problems it seems with the more recent account openings at the Royal Bank of Commerce. I believe that the vast majority of accounts registered in the last ten days have all been experiencing the login problems you outlined in your message of 13 May. Using the account/password information you provided in your message of 10 May, I have been able to log into the bank system successfully. As requested, the account/password information for the Eagle's account is as follows:

Account: GotzborgEagle      Password: GotzborgMoney

I recommend strongly minding the case of the letters as the system is very sensitive about case for not just the password, but also for the account name.

Regarding the Gotzborg Eagle, I enjoyed your editorial on Mother's Day and think that it was very well worded and written. You have a talent for words Mr. Wilde and I look forward to your future editorials. I fully understand your macronational university commitments and take those into consideration as I too am in university (though I'm off for the summer right now, at least for a few weeks).

Feel assured that I do not expect you or want you to publish the Eagle at such a rate that would cause you to neglect your macronational commitments. Though, mind you, I would enjoy reading another article as it's been well over a week since your last.

Yours,

Liam Sinclair
